Naw Haven, Conn., Nov. 26.—The Tale football team which defeated the Harvard eleven yesterday was coached and trained so that it hit its highest point against the Haughton eleven.

Those who saw the Yale-Princeton game could not believe that Black's team could stand up under the strain of so great a bastle and the come back and play as battle and then come back and play as Percy Haughton's men.
It did against Harvard.

The defeat of Harvard.

The scrap showed against Princeton was not in it with the one displayed yesterday, as Yale was up against a far yesterday, as Yale was up against a far different proposition, but it handled it with great success. For years Yale showed flashes of offence and on some occasions had one that was good until a real punch was needed near the goal line, and then it fell down. Tad Jones not only had a very efficient staff of coaches but the services of men like Heffelfinger. Foster, Rock-well, Smith and Jack Cates in developing the team. Built Up Gradually.

Tad Jones did not built his offence in a short time, for he used fundamental formations throughout the season and then added a little more in the way of drive to what he already had. It was not a deceptive attack, but a hard one which wears an opponent down and is bound to gain ground. The Harvard attack, no the other hand, was built on deception and hence not powerful unless hibitions of the year.

Yale's victory over Harvard was accomplished through sheer brute force all along the line. The Elis had a com-bination from end to end admirably This kind of attack depends upon getting through the line of scrimmain clear Harvard's deceptive plays got off well enough, but when they struck the Yale line they were usually stopped. The Ell line was solid and the smashing of its men completing a long pass for victory or a gain that would enable it to get a shot at a field goal and a tie score. They came very near it.

Harvard's experience this season, which brought defeats by Yale, Brown and Tufts, has impressed the Crimson with the fact that it takes more than a ball club until midway in October, and the most important work of sorting out the candidates and developing the fundamentals of attack and defence was left to Leo Leary. Leary is a competent man, but the task requires that one man be in charge from start to finish. In consequence, it is almost certain that Haughton will wind up his connection with the Boston ball club, and will devote all his time next autumn to

In the other big game on Saturday the Army defeated the Navy. Yet despite the adherence to form, the contest was surprise, for it was only in Oliphant Vidal and McEwan that the cadets held any individual advantages over the midshipmen. Oliphant established his place in the All Eastern backfield, and Vidal was not very far behind the Hoosier streak. The Navy showed a lot of young fighters who will develop to make the result of next year's game with the Army no foregone conclusion. The Army built everything around Oliphant, and when he could not be stopped the Navy was beaten. It was a far better football game than that of last year. At Boston Syracuse regained some lit-
